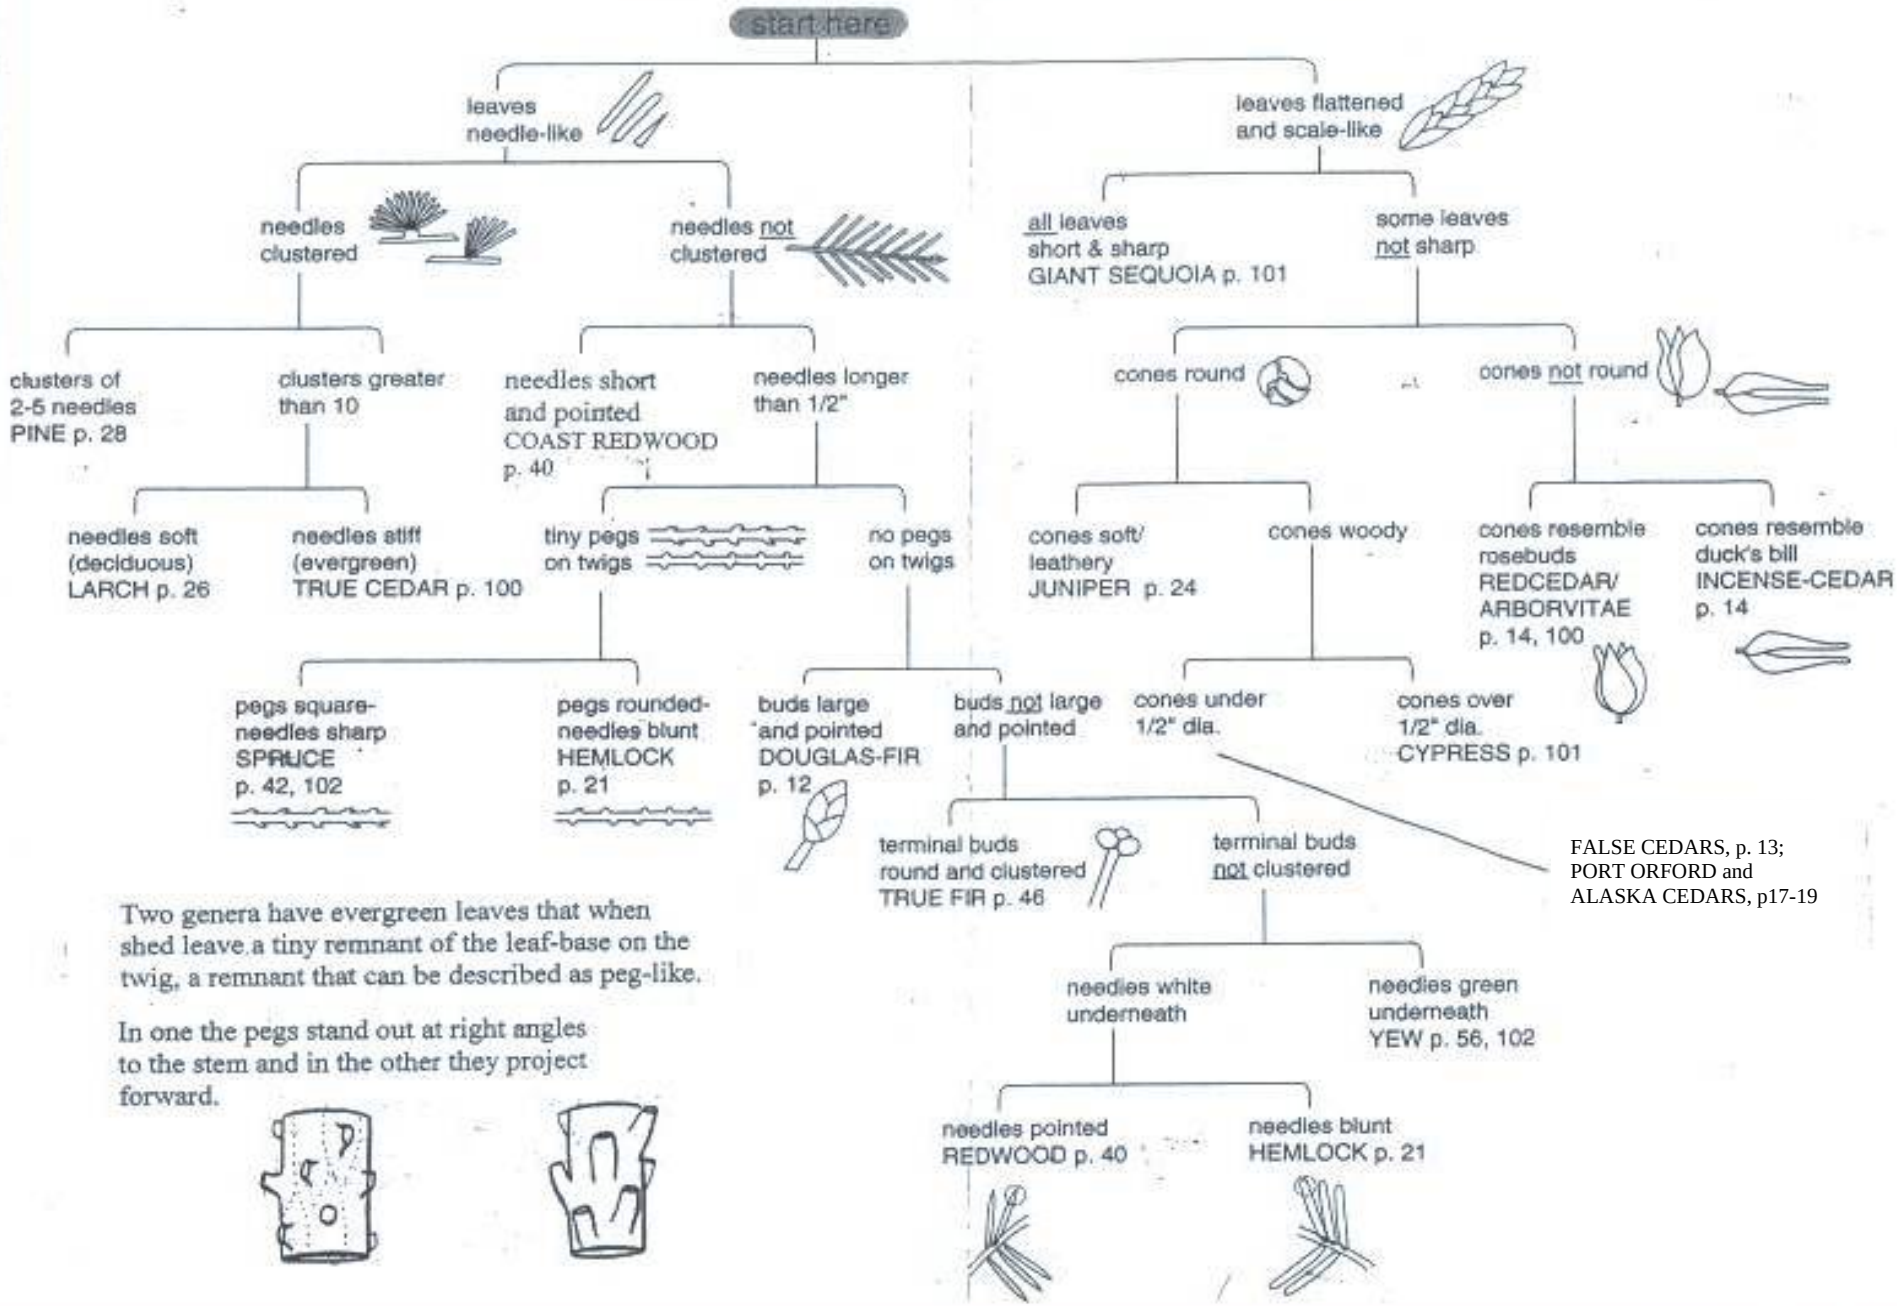
Common Conifers of Oregon



Two genera have evergreen leaves that when shed leave a tiny remnant of the leaf-base on the twig, a remnant that can be described as peg-like.

In one the pegs stand out at right angles to the stem and in the other they project forward.