Evaluation Procedure
Revised: 8-18-10

Informed consent process:

A waiver of the informed consent process is requested because it is believed that the following criteria established by IRB for the waived informed consent is met:
1. The curriculum evaluation involves no more than minimal risk;
2. The waiver will not adversely affect the rights or welfare of the subjects;
3. The evaluation cannot be practicably carried out without the waiver;
4. In addition, there is no “debriefing” regarding the evaluation that needs to occur.

In all cases, youth participants will be asked to give their verbal assent to participate in the evaluation process prior to completing the evaluation materials as follows:

Script for survey administrator:

At the end of the last lesson or within a week of the last lesson:

Your class has been picked to be part of an experiment to represent other kids your age. We want to find out what kids your age think and do, when it comes to food and exercise. You will see some statements on the form I am going to give you, but this is not a test. I want you to share what you think, today, when you look at the statement.

You will see two sets of boxes. At the top of each box there is a statement. In the first box we want you to circle the best answer to each question thinking about what you did before we had our lessons together. In the second box circle the best answer to each question, thinking about what you are doing now that our lessons together are complete. You can see the Response Key above the boxes. The numbers inside the boxes mean: Always=4, Sometimes=3, Not very often =2 and Never=1. There are no right or wrong answers. You might not want to answer some of the questions and that is OK.
